"Take My Advice" Chautauqua Comedy

Three Act Drama to be Presented on Second Night

Something just a little different is promised as the dramatic number at the Chautauqua, when the offering will be the new comedy success "Take My Advice," which boasts of a run of several months at the Belmont Theatre in New York.

That this new play is meritorious is evidenced from these few lines taken from the New York Journal's review of the performance: "It started with chuckles. They swelled into giggles. Then the first night audience at the Belmont Theatre last night burst into uproarious laughter as a clever young prep school professor, with a flair for modern psychology, rescued the whole Weaver family—ma, pa and their son and daughter—from the machinations of three swindlers."

Bud Weaver, a callow youth of seventeen, quits school to marry a girl "old enough to be his mother." She has been in town a month and has been engaged to every eligible man in the village. Bud's father has the "mountain pen."

Gould Academy Notes

The first declamations of the term were given Friday afternoon, the last period classes being omitted. There were twenty-four on the roll and all classes were represented. The declamations were well given with poise and self assurance which showed the hard work and effort of pupils and our public speaking teacher, Miss Cottrill.

Representatives are to be chosen soon for the annual public speaking contest.

Kittenball

Last Monday the athletic field was the scene of a hard fought battle of kittenball, the seniors finally emerging from the fray, victors by a score of 13-11 over the Sophomores.

Hinckley was very effective in the early stages of the game and the offense were aided greatly by loose playing on the part of the Senior infield, which constituted the whole team. At the end of the fourth inning the score was 11-3, Sophomores. The seniors then lined out a few hits and came out at the end of the fourth with five more runs added to their tally. Continued attacks on the surprised Sophomores in the last two frames gave the seniors a sufficient number of runs to win the game. The Sophomores were retired easily in the last three innings. The game decided second place in the series. The juniors having been undefeated during the season, climbed to the citadel marking first place.

Mrs. Gertrude Hapgood and daughter, Bertha and Mrs. Laurence Lord called on Mrs. Lord's mother, Mrs. Alice Olway of Gilead one day last week.

New Tweeds and Suits at Lyons' adv.

Frank A. Webb, Dept. Commander of the Sons of Union Veterans, W. E. Powers, State Organizer, and Herman Rolfe, all of Bridgton, and A. E. Smith of Augusta were in town Tuesday evening to attend the installation of Col. C. S. Edwards Camp.

Mrs. Winifred Howe entertained at bridge on Saturday evening in honor of Prof. Alton Richardson. Those present were Mrs. Harry Brown, Mrs. Wade Thurston, Mrs. Eugene Van Den Kerckhove, Mrs. Earl Davis, Mrs. Leanne Howe, Lauris Tyler, the guest of honor, and the hostess, Mrs. Van won first prize and Mrs. Wade Thurston the consolation prize.

Comrades of the Way Hold Convention

At Congregational Church, Saturday. About Sixty Present

The fall convention of the Comrades of the Way was held at the Bethel Congregational Church, Saturday, Oct. 27, with about sixty comrades present.

The first hour was spent in getting acquainted and at eleven o'clock the Devotional Services began. The program started with a hymn and Rev. L. A. Edwards led in the responsive reading and prayer. Miss Carrie Wight gave a very interesting talk on "Ways and Means for Promoting the Good of the Order," which was followed by a few suggestions from other comrades.

Chief Comrade John extended the welcome to the members of the Portland Chapter.

Dinner was served at twelve o'clock. After dinner the guests were escorted over the Academy, Gymnasium and dormitories.

At one-thirty the entertainment program started with a one-act play given by Dorothy Edwards, Carolyn Cushman, Iva Bartlett, Ernest Hancock, and Carleton Holmes. A violin trio by Daniel Wight, Addison Saunders, and Barbara Herrick, violin duet by the two former, and a violin and saxophone duet by Barbara Herrick and John Twaddle made up the musical part of the program. The closing number on the program was a humorous reading and encore by Carolyn Cushman. From this time until four o'clock the time was spent in showing the visitors various points of interest about the town.

At four o'clock the candidates for both chapters were initiated by the Henry F. Merrill Chapter of Portland. The new comrades of the Bethel Chapter are Philip Carter, Paul Chapman, Frances Chapman, Merle Kimball, Reginald Allen, William Wight, John Twaddle, Frances King and Adella Hanson. After the conclusion of the business session games were enjoyed until six o'clock when supper was served.

After supper Arthur Dudley rendered a solo and two encores which started the songs and cheers that lasted until seven thirty when the Portland Chapter started for home.

Tripp-Simard

Miss Aline Simard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Simard of 176 Goveas St., Biddeford, and Perley Melvin Tripp of Bethel were married at the rectory of St. Andrew parish in Biddeford at four o'clock Sunday afternoon, October 21st.

The bridesmaid was Miss Beatrice Hamel of Biddeford, an intimate friend of the bride, who wore ecru satin faced canton. The bride's gown was also of satin-faced canton crepe, trimmed with velvet. She wore a corsage bouquet of rosebuds. Alton Carroll of Bethel was the best man.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at 8 o'clock Sunday evening. Miss Beatrice Hamel and Albert Simard assisted in receiving.

Among the guests from outside the city were Albert Simard of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Packard, Alton Carroll, Miss Ida Packard and Miss Elizabeth Morse of Bethel and Miss Melba Packard of Portland. Mr. and Mrs. Polay and family and the Misses Harard of Lewiston.

The couple received many beautiful wedding gifts which were displayed at the home.

The bride attended St. Andrew School and was graduated from the public schools of Biddeford. She has been employed at Hay's Hosiery Shop.

The groom is employed at Saco Lowell shops.

Mr. and Mrs. Tripp will occupy an apartment on Main St., Biddeford.

NOTICE

On account of the Presidential election the Probate Court at Rumford, on Tuesday next, is automatically adjourned to Wednesday following.

ABBREVIATED

"Aunt Dinah, what are the names of your twin children?" asked a caller. Aunt Dinah smiled with pride. "De boys' name am Alphabet, an' de girls' name am Alphabeta," she said.

"Could I see them?"
 "Yes, I'll call 'em," said Dinah. And shutting to the door she cupped her hands and called, "Alphabet! Alphabeta!"

Trying to Please Him
 "Ah, monsieur! I call to see Mr. Smith," said the foreign visitor.

"You can't, he's not down," replied the valet.
 "But you tell?" said the visitor. "I come yesterday and you say I cannot see him because he is not up. Now you say I cannot see him because he is not down. What you mean? You will be in the middle?"

Welfare Work
 Eloise is a dear little girl who decided to go in for welfare work. So she came home and explained to her mother that she had made 40 calls on poor people.

"Do you mean to say you saw 40 people in one day?"
 "I didn't see all of them, mother. At some places I left cards."

WOULD REGRET IT

"If a man steals, he'll live to regret it."
 "What stole n' him from me last night?"
 "Well, what I stole, guess."

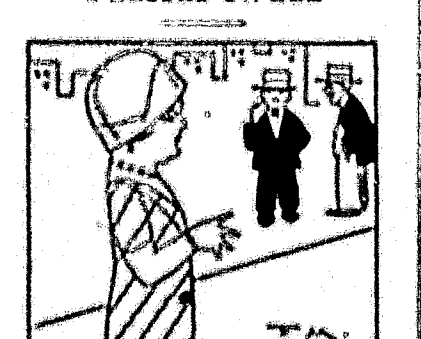

Muzzle Her
 A dog was about to bite a little girl. The girl's mother said, "Muzzle her!"

Apology With a Kick
 "In your letter this morning you wrote of my crash of the public meeting last night as the 'dumbest thing of a lifetime'." "What?" "My dear sir, I am truly sorry if it appeared that way to you. The word I used was 'dumb'."

Intermediate
 Formerly the teacher I hear, Bert, that while you were in the city so long up the lake golf. How'd you like it?
 Bert: Well, it ain't bad. It's a bit harder than 'bein' turnin' on a bit easier than 'bein' turnin' on a bit.

That's the One
 Johnson: I hear Smith is looking for a car. Is it true?
 Jones: That's the one he is looking for.

DRESSES SWELL

"Did you say the dresses swell?"
 "No, dresses swell—she's fat."

Humble Pyrotechnics
 The steady brings a gentle glow. He makes an entrance into. He says his duty here below. And then the best he can.

Looking Out for the Future
 Mother: "Robert, how do you account for these cigarettes in your pocket?"
 Robert: "I'm—I'm saving 'em till I'm allowed to smoke, mother."

And Such Prizes
 Father: "Pussy was a loving cat last night."
 Mother: "I didn't know they gave prizes for that—The Pathfinder."

Just So
 "Bird stories seem to run largely to just so."
 "They don't run to just so years," "I see, durable stock."

SOUTH WATERFORD

Mrs. Luella Jones, who has been helping Mrs. Jennie Hammond with the housework left for her home in North Bridgton recently. After a rest she is to go to Naples for the winter.

Clyde Millett had the misfortune to lose his five months colt on Friday night. The colt was hitched for the first time that day. Mr. Millett went away for a short time and on his return the colt was found cast in the stall and dead.

Dr. and Mrs. Stone of Troy, N. Y., were week end guests of their friends, Mrs. Minnie Guilford and her brother, Frank Billings, on Oct. 21st. Mrs. Guilford returned to Troy with them.

Mrs. Margaret J. Taylor of Stillwater, N. Y., arrived at her daughter's, Mrs. W. J. Green's Wednesday morning for a visit. Mrs. Green met her at Portland.

Wednesday night another fine supper was served at the Grange Hall. Mrs. Hazel Kimball and Lillian Kimball served the supper. The picture "The Tale of Two Cities" was to have been presented, but owing to strong addressing the films went to North Waterford instead of North Waterford. Many were disappointed and it was a large gathering.

The Religious School of Education closed on Tuesday night. New ones attending this past week were Mrs. Fannie J. Green and Mrs. Marion Hamlin. Only one attended for credit. Ethel M. Monroe took the Training in the Devotional Life under Rev. Raymond Morgan of Norway, and she received a card of credit. The third she has won since this school started.

Mrs. Ida B. Riggs spent the past week in her home, coming here on Monday after her visit in Andover and Bethel. She left for Harrison on Saturday.

Mrs. M. Elta Watson is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parker in Cumberland Mills. He returned with them on their trip Wednesday. Mrs. Watson is to have her eyes fitted while away.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Townsend were in the village calling recently. Mrs. Townsend is making a good recovery from her serious fall of a year and a half ago.

W. W. Abbott and Charles Lockwood of the Flat motor to the Sibley Farms in Spencer, Mass., the past week and on to Killybeg Farm in Barre, Mass., owned by the late Col. William Gordon.

Mrs. Martha Perry had quite a home party on Monday when her nephews and nieces, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burdett of Cambridge, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Leman of Waterbury, Conn., and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leman of Naples spent the day with her.

Mrs. Sarah Hamilton and Mrs. Gertrude Rogers were entertained at dinner by Mrs. L. M. and Mrs. Mary Howard. The table was covered with the best of the local produce, but unfortunately the guests did not eat it all.

Mrs. Rogers, daughter of Auburn, has been a week and guest of her father, Charles, with this past week. She is a very popular visitor. When she is in town and has nothing to do, she is a great help to her mother. Mrs. Rogers is a very good housewife.

Those attending the supper and the dance were very much pleased with the entertainment given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamlin.

lin, Carl Hamlin, Mrs. A. A. Monroe, and Ethel M. Monroe. Inspection comes on Thursday, Nov. 1st.

New models and THE OPEN MIND

THE public, with its healthy desire for the new and the better, insists upon continuous improvement, and will withdraw its patronage from any product or service which stands still.

Nowhere is this more true than in the automobile industry. The car is more than a utility. It is a personal thing, involving your convenience, your comfort, your safety, your sense of beauty and color, your pride of ownership, your complete environment for many hours of your life. Customs and habits of living change fast; and the past holds many warnings of how quickly your favor can shift when an automobile, for even a single year, fails to show progress.

So continuous improvement is more than a policy with General Motors. It is a vital necessity.

THE PUBLIC DEMANDS NEW MODELS

And the public is right. Out of that demand have come electric starting and lighting, the closed body, Duco finish, four-wheel brakes and hundreds of refinements, big and little. Improvements that might have taken a generation have been born within a few years because people want greater performance, beauty and comfort.

Equipped with the largest research laboratories, proving ground and body building plants, and guided by an Open Mind which is ready to revise its thinking in response to new facts, General Motors believes that it is peculiarly fitted not only to sense but to anticipate public demand and to give the people better automobiles at better values year after year.

As evidence of that faith we presented some months ago the New Chevrolet, the New Pontiac, the New Oldsmobile. And now we offer, with equal pride, the New Buick, the New Cadillac, the New LaSalle and the New Oakland.

CHEVROLET. 7 Bigger and Better models, $495 to $715. 4-wheel brakes. More powerful engine. Luxurious Fisher Bodies. New colors. Also Light Delivery Truck chassis; $475; Utility Truck chassis with 4 speeds forward; $520.

PONTIAC. 7 models, $745 to $875. Lower priced General Motors Six—now more power, greater economy—more speed, greater acceleration. Arresting beauty of bodies by Fisher expresses the vogue of the hour.

OLDSMOBILE. 7 models, $925 to $1085. Also 5 DeLuxe models, $1145 to $1235. "The fine Car at Low Price." Completely redesigned and improved by General Motors. More powerful, 4-wheel brakes. Longer, roomier Fisher Bodies.

OAKLAND. 7 models of the new All American Six, recently announced, $1145 to $1375. Distinctive new original appearance. Solid new performance. Luxurious appointments, in new bodies by Fisher. A car you'll be proud to own.

BUICK. 18 Silver Anniversary models on 3 wheel-bases, $1195 to $2145. Lightning flash getaway. Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher. Comfort and luxury in every mile. Power for the steepest hill and the longest run.

LASALLE. 13 new models, $2295 to $2875. Attractive car of Continental lines. Companion car to Cadillac. 90 degree V-type 8 cylinder engine. Beautiful Bodies by Fisher. Striking Duco color combinations.

CADILLAC. 26 models, $3295 to $5000. Standard of the world. Famous 90 degree V-type 8 cylinder engine. Luxurious Bodies by Fisher and Fleetwood. An extensive range of color and upholstery combinations.

 Angelo gave him laugh. "The first is to eat up my lunch a sandwich with me."

Side by side the Jones—as we talk too—swapped a cheese for a can of which.

"Will you be here?" "Jones?" said the g.

"Why?" asked the "do you—and all always use my name long to me?"

Angelo dimpled. doesn't!" she retort.

"And I suppose they are also saying from justice and because I come up fishing. I'll tell you with you people is too long!"

Angelo frowned. stand," she said.

"You have too many Mystery stories and stuff. You pore of then endow the first whose grandparent with some weird h."

"Then you don't demurely, "that true fiction?"

"Indeed, I don't," ganton. "The fiction days is a thousand tortured and strange thought of being!"

"Then how," den triumph, "do you across the gunvane fer."

Her companion ously. Then, much felt a flash mouth.

"Mr. Charles C. Jones—or whatever Pisco Village, M."

It was postmarked Angelo was talking envelope. "You se over, things aren't seem on the surface, are Mr.—of I am not the simple maid you und I have had my college for girls, by my hat when I'm seem to put an idea born. Certainly, y letter!"

For the man, on what she had said, better as if exulted his contents.

An he read it, frowned then, with shoulders, tossed it "Dear Charles:"

"I am much am tell me of the nusi an addressing this to help the good way, perhaps I will all, dear Charles."

"Congratulations!" her heart would not by as she said it.

The man shook his mistaken," he said played fast and long. This time mied for keeps. At the first time he seems she was—a beautiful less cultured than some one else than ill!"

Fiction and the Stranger

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

THE natives living in the village of Plisco at the head of the lake speculated endlessly about the man who had hired Jim Taylor's cabin on Lower Arm. He said that he had come up for the trout fishing and was going to stay until he had caught a fish big enough to brag to his friends at home about.

"My Angeline thinks he has been disappointed in a love affair," chuckled the storekeeper. "Trust the girls for thinking something like that!"

"More likely he's run away from something or other. Don't look to me like a man by the name of Jones!" said a listener.

At the moment of this discussion the gentleman himself was engaged in his regular occupation—that of trolling from Jim's old tub.

Luck had not been with him this morning. He was for giving it up when, far down the lake, he saw another boat which had evidently just rounded Pine Point and was now heading in his direction. Its lone occupant standing in the stern. The best trout grounds were reputed to be at the upper end of the lake and although he had had Lower Arm to himself.

Well—he certainly wasn't going to go ashore and leave what wary fish might have been dodging his hook to be caught by a rival.

Then, as the launch drew nearer, he saw that it held Angus Russell, the very pretty daughter of the storekeeper.

Ceasing his slow overhand hauling of the line, he gave her a friendly wave. Had the fish been biting, the proximity of another fisherman would have annoyed him exceedingly. As it was, he was ready to exchange the monotony of futile labor for an agreeable chat.

"How's your luck?" He had always marveled at the lovely contrast of a voice that had grown up amid so much nasal twang.

"Punk!"

Angus gave her charming little laugh. "The first thing I always do is to eat up my lunch. Will you have a sandwich with me?"

Side by side they anchored and Jones—as he might as well call him, too—swapped a doughnut and some cheese for a canned chicken sandwich.

"Will you be here much longer, Mr. Jones?" said the girl suddenly.

"Why," asked the man, countering, "do you—and all the rest of you—always use my name as if it didn't belong to me?"

Angus dimpled. "People say it doesn't," she retorted frankly.

"And I suppose," he continued, "they are also saying I am a fugitive from justice and similar things! Just because I come up here for a little fishing. I'll tell you what the matter with you people is—your winters are too long!"

Angus frowned. "I don't understand," she said.

"You have too much time to read. Mystery stories and all that sort of stuff. You pore over wild tales and then endow the first person you meet whose grandparents you don't know with some weird history."

"Then you don't think," she said demurely, "that truth is stranger than fiction?"

"Indeed, I don't," snapped her companion. "The fiction written nowadays is a thousand times more distorted and strange than any truth ever thought of being!"

"Then how," demanded the girl in triumph, "do you explain this?" And across the gunwales she tossed a letter.

Her companion picked it up curiously. Then, much to his chagrin, he felt a flush mounting his forehead.

"Mr. Charles C. Whitcomb—alias Jones—or whatever!"

Plisco Village, Maine.

It was postmarked New York.

Angus was talking as he ripped the envelope. "You see, Mr.—er—Whatever, things aren't always as they seem on the surface. You, for instance, are Mr.—er—Whatever, while I am not the simple, untutored mountain maid you undoubtedly think me. I have had my four years at a big college for girls, but I keep it under my hat when I'm home so as not to seem to put on airs among my neighbors. Certainly, you may read your letter!"

For the man, only dimly aware of what she had said, was lingering his gaze as if anxious indeed to know its contents.

As he read it, he frowned, then frowned then, with a shiver of his shoulders, tossed it back to her.

"Dear Charles:

"I am much amused at what you tell me of the suspicious natives and am addressing this letter in a way to help the good work along. By the way, perhaps I will marry you after all, dear Charles."

"MADELAINE"

"Congratulations!" Angus wished her heart would not flutter so queerly as she said it.

The man shook his head. "She is mistaken," he said quietly. "She played fast and loose with me too long. This time my heart has been mended for keeps. At least—" and for the first time he seemed to see Angus as she was—a beautiful young woman no less cultured than himself—"until some one else than Madeleine breaks it!"

PAUL'S LAST JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 20:1-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Remember, the words of the Lord Jesus how he said, it is more blessed to give than to receive.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Tells His Friends Good-bye.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Pastor Does for Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul, Shepherd of the Churches.

1.—Paul's Visit to Greece and Miletus (20:1-10).

Two incidents marked this trip:

1. The Jews laid wait for him (vv. 1-5).

This plot obliged him to retrace his steps through Macedonia instead of choosing a more rapid sea voyage.

2. Fellowshiping with the disciples at Troas (vv. 6-10). He met with them around the table of the Lord and spoke words of encouragement. While preaching here, Eutychus in a deep sleep, fell from a window and was killed. Paul restored his life, thus giving to the disciples a sign of divine power which was greatly needed at that time.

11. Paul's Farewell to the Ephesian Elders (20:17-35).

1. Review of his three years' ministry (vv. 18-21). (1) The spirit of his ministry (v. 10). He was humble, tender and faithful in spite of the many trials which befell him. (2) The faithfulness of his ministry (vv. 20-21). He made known unto them everything which was of profit, taught them both in public and in private. He neglected no class, Jews or Greeks. He was impartial in all his ministry. (3) The theme of his ministry (v. 21). Repentance and faith. Men and women need to repent of their sins and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. The present state of things (vv. 22-27). Having reviewed his ministry, he now points out clearly: (1) His immediate purpose was to go to Jerusalem (v. 22). (2) Bonds and afflictions were lying across his path (v. 23). Despite these he went forward with undaunted courage, knowing that God was leading him. (3) His fixed purpose (v. 24). He was determined to complete his ministry at whatever cost—even giving up his life. (4) His consciousness of obligation discharged (vv. 25-27). Knowing that they should see his face no more, he called them to record that he had not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God, therefore was free from the blood of all men.

3. His charge to the elders (vv. 28-35). (1) The ground of (v. 28). The flock for which they must care was purchased by the precious blood of Jesus and they had received their commission from the Lord. (2) The impending evils (vv. 29, 30). False teachers would arise from their own number. Grievous wolves would devour the flock. The most deadly foes of the church are those ministers and Sunday-school teachers who are unfaithful to their trust. (3) Incentives to faithfulness (vv. 31-35). His own example of watching night and day for three years is held up before them.

III. Paul Tarrying Seven Days at Tyre (21:1-6).

His destination was Jerusalem. He was pressing thitherward with all speed, but on account of the unloading of the ship he was obliged to wait at Tyre for seven days. During this delay he searched out the disciples who lived in that city. While here certain disciples said Paul should not go to Jerusalem. The information which these disciples received by the Spirit was doubtless the same as that given to Agabus (vv. 10, 11). Agabus told exactly what the Spirit said, which sets right what the Tyrian disciples seemed to say. We should give heed to prophesying, but should prove their utterances. Let all who claim to speak with the Holy Spirit give the exact words so that they can be subjected to legitimate tests. The same Spirit which showed to these disciples that suffering awaited Paul, revealed unto him the same suffering and sent him forward into it.

IV. Paul Tarrying in Philip's House (vv. 7-14).

Resuming their journey they paused briefly at Ptolemais to greet the brethren there after which they went to Caesarea. Here they took up their abode with Philip who had so successfully wrought in the early days of the church. His four daughters doubtless are mentioned to show that the Spirit's gifts are not confined to one sex.

V. Paul at Jerusalem (vv. 15-17).

The brethren at Jerusalem gladly received him and his companions. Paul's lodging place was with an old disciple.

Little Things

Little foxes that spoil the vineyards: Little compromises with the world; disobedience to the still small voice in little things; little indulgences of the flesh to the neglect of duty; little strokes of policy; doing evil in little things that good may come; and the beauty and the fruitfulness of the vine are sacrificed.—J. Hudson Taylor.

A Divine Pull

All who stand "with God" have a divine pull.—Lee

PROGRESS NOTED IN HUMANE TRAPS

Some of our readers have very likely followed with interest the growing movement to humanize trapping. Several States have enacted laws controlling use of the steel trap and others have had bills under consideration with this aim. Game commissioners are many of them in sympathy with reform and the General Federation of Women's Clubs advocates legal abolition of devices for capturing fur bearing animals which do not kill immediately or take unhurt. The public generally is coming to realize that present methods of trapping are inconsistent with modern notions of justice to the lower orders of life.

Those who have witnessed the agony of victims of the steel trap need not be told that this device inflicts terrible suffering directly, and indirectly, distress from privation and cold. These facts are vividly depicted in a book entitled "From Thumbtack to Steeltrap," which may be secured from the American S. P. C. A., New York. Dr. Edward Brock of the Anti-Steel-Trap League, Washington, D. C., shows motion pictures of trapped animals which plead their cause with pitiful eloquence. The protection of domestic animals from traps of all varieties is a problem in itself deserving attention.

A good many traps of a more humane sort are already on the market. Among manufacturers of killing or live traps are the Bigelow Company, Marysville, Ohio, the Sals Company, Cleveland, W. A. Gibbs, Chester, Pa., E. L. Herson, Fitchburg, Mass., and the Crown Iron Works Company, Minneapolis.

About one hundred devices were submitted to the American Humane Association, Albany, N. Y., in a recent contest, many of them developed by trappers. S. C. Booth, East Farnham, Quebec, Canada, was awarded first prize for a humanized steel-jaw trap and Herman Bleck of Hammond, Indiana, won second. Third prize went to the Humane Animal Trap Company, Austin, Pa.

All interested in obtaining changes in trapping customs are urged to promote legislation in this direction. Contributions to assist campaigns may be sent to the Anti-Steel-Trap League, Washington, D. C.

Great things can not be accomplished without the proper means.

Tariff Differences

A tariff levied for the support of the government only is called a tariff for revenue. A tariff levied with a view to increase the cost of foreign goods, and thus to assist native manufacturers, is called a protective tariff. A tariff so high that it practically shuts out foreign goods is called a prohibitive tariff.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thurston and Miss Ruby Thurston gave a Halloween party to their near neighbors on Saturday evening. The guests were received by two ghosts, namely, Baker Thurston and Forest Ladd. Nearly everyone was in costume and the ghosts judged the costumes. The prize for ladies was awarded to Miss Minnie Wilson and for men to Carl Edwards. A series of games and stunts were enjoyed by all after which a delicious buffet lunch was served. This was followed by a jolly good sing with Mrs. Thurston at the piano. The hour to go home came all too soon.

Harold Bennett of Arlington, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bennett, was a recent guest at the home of his parents.

THE WOMAN HE MARRIES

Glendon was talking to me about what he would do when he got out of college. He is a little uncertain about his future. It is not that he has done his work indifferently. Quite the contrary. He has had a really distinguished record as a student, and shows ability in whatever he has undertaken to do. He has thought some of teaching, and if he should choose that profession he realizes that it will be quite necessary for him to go further in his education than a mere bachelor's degree. He has more than ordinary opportunities for entering business, and has given no little thought to doing that.

"You know I came from the farm," he said as we were talking, "and though I have done no specialization in agriculture I have a real interest in farming and a real desire to go back to the country—2500 farm life. I enjoy the country and animals, and the open air. I know that there is no chance for a farmer to make a fortune, but farming is a healthy, honorable occupation and I often reach the conclusion that it is the life for me."

I have felt the same way, myself, so often that I could quite appreciate his point of view. There is much in farm life that I enjoy, and I know well the hard side of farming.

"I suppose I'm going to think about these things," he went on, "but I realize that what I go into and the success I make of it will depend very largely on the sort of woman I marry. You couldn't take every woman to the farm and make her happy or have her make you happy. There must be co-operation and especially between a farmer and his wife."

The woman a man marries does make a tremendous difference in what the man accomplishes.

Men everywhere are made or lost through the women they marry.

ICELAND
NOT ICY

Girls of Iceland.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.

ICELAND is going in for better farming. Its prime minister, on a visit to Europe, is arranging for the importation of fertilizer.

To one who has never been on the island or who has not read closely of its climatic conditions, farming might seem out of the question. Iceland's very name naturally suggests a frozen waste. And when a prospective visitor consults a map and finds that this island lies across the very threshold of the Arctic ocean, hard by the glacial coast of Greenland, and 300 miles farther north than Alaska, he is almost prepared to come upon a land of polar bears and of fur-clad folk living in snow igloos.

Iceland is ruled by both nature and man. On many charts the most important physical fact does not appear. Up from the south flows the warm Gulf Stream to enfold the island and work the magic of whistling it, in effect, nearly a thousand miles toward the Equator; so that its climate is not that of the polar regions, but of southern Canada or northern United States.

On Iceland's coasts are thriving towns with buildings of stone, gabled roofs and church steeples, busy streets and electric lights. In the streets are men and women garbed much as are the inhabitants of Copenhagen and Glasgow, Ottawa and Minneapolis. One's eyes tell him that here is the same civilization that Europe and America know.

And immaterial factors proclaim the truth still more unmistakably than do material things. Here, in this far northern land, a worthy national literature and stable national institutions were developed when much of Europe was hounding it the Dark Ages. Here the lamp of a Nordic Renaissance burned and lighted its own region before the beacon of the Latin Renaissance was held aloft to light the way for the world. This northern light has never failed. Today the literacy rate is higher in Iceland than in many countries in Europe.

It is true that physically Iceland's best foot is forward. Its most pleasant aspect is its fringe of coast. Inland it is in nowise a pretty country, though the distinction may be made that it possesses much scenery of beauty—a weird, magnificent beauty coupled with desolation; for, though Iceland is not the icy waste that distant popular fancy would make it, it fared less fortunately at the hands of another of nature's great forces, fire. The land is actively volcanic, and in the interior, on every hand, are the evidences of great fiery outbursts of the past. To tourists it presents none of these scenes which have made other lands popular. No forests, no rich meadows, no prosperous appearing farms with beautiful gardens.

Volcanoes and earthquakes. Ages ago Iceland was thrown up from the ocean by volcanic action. The most famous of the island's hundred odd volcanoes is Hekla—perhaps because it was so effectively used in the proceedings of the medieval monks and ecclesiastics to symbolize the descent into hell. Its eruptions often have been accompanied by tremendous earthquakes and have wrought great destruction to life and property.

Earthquakes are inseparable in a volcanic region, and Iceland has had its full share of these devastating tremors.

The storms of 1883, while destructive to the coast, had at least one beneficent result that might be closed on sentimentally. They brought new life into the world-famous Great Fjords, which it was entirely dead, but at least became a rather indifferent performer. It was suddenly rejuvenated and all the smaller geyser in the vicinity repeated simultaneously. Several new ones were also formed.

Lord Dufferin describes the land in the immediate vicinity of Reykjavik as being infested with many tumors and boils, for in a hundred places are seen the bare spots and mounds of wet clay or silty sand, where the hot springs bubble up, either crystal clear or gray and heavy with mud.

Hot springs are not, however, confined to the vicinity of Reykjavik; they are found throughout Iceland, and in almost every valley are seen vistas of white steam.

These steaming springs have had a marked effect on the nomenclature of the land. Reykjavik means "Smoking Harbor; Reykjaes, "Smoking Point"; Reykholt, the home of the historian Snorri Sturluson, means "Smoking Hill." On every side is found that Reyk, meaning "smoke."

Why Living Room is "Bathroom." There is a curious custom throughout Iceland of calling the living room, which is also the sleeping room for the whole family, the "bathroom." This is said to have come about in the following way:

According to the sagas, the island was once full of forests, which furnished ample fuel for the comfort-loving Vikings. They loved their hot baths, and in each home the favorite room was the one which contained the smoldering tub. Stones were heated in bonfires and thrown into the water to bring it to the right temperature.

However, as the forests disappeared, and with them the fuel, the hot baths disappeared also; but the room kept its name. Although changed to a general living room, it is still called the "bathroom."

A saving of fuel is now being effected to some extent by the use of the heat that nature furnishes so lavishly in the form of hot springs. Another possible remedy for Iceland's fuel scarcity is hydroelectric power. Some of the towns already have municipally owned power plants which utilize waterfalls, and some progressive farmers have small plants of their own.

The advent of electricity, of course, paved the way for manufacturers. Today practically the only industry of the island, besides sheep-raising and farming, is fishing. The floating population swings back and forth—to the farming regions in harvest time and to the sea during the fishing season. With a surplus of electric power, factories of various sorts may be established.

In the Western Islands (Westmansey), a few miles south of the main island, the fisheries yield nearly $1,000,000 annually, and there is proportionately more wealth among the 6,000 inhabitants of this little archipelago than among the 100,000 in the whole of Iceland proper.

Birds a Source of Income. These rocky, sheer-walled Western Islands have an adventurous industry built on the taking of young birds and eggs from the cliffs at much risk to the collector, who often has to dangle from a rope to reach the nests.

The native birds are a source of income to the Icelanders. The down which the elder duck plucks from its breast and uses to line its nest is collected, cleaned, and shipped to Europe for high prices.

The puffin, a peculiar, parrotlike sea bird, has difficulty in flying and is easily caught in long-handled nets. Its feathers are used for down and the flesh, which is quite palatable, is eaten in all the coast towns.

That the Icelanders are confronted with many hardships cannot be denied, and it is a source of surprise to many people that, faced by such a hard life, the natives do not emigrate in larger numbers. In spite of adverse conditions, in spite of earthquakes, and volcanic eruptions, and the absence of luxuries, the Icelanders cling to their land with fierce pride.

They feel strongly that one thing gives and values highly the culture and civilization that they have practically without outside help and in which the Iceland of today has its roots. Not only have they long looked upon the most literate people in the world, but they possess a broad knowledge and excellent taste in literature.

The people of Iceland have a great reverence for their own language, and many of their customs and ways are especially strict. Their songs are popular throughout the country and read with the best of any nation.

Iceland was the first country to accept women a vote in municipal affairs, and here they may also retain their maiden names after marriage. In 1924, two years before the United States celebrated its one hundredth anniversary of its existence, Iceland observed the one thousandth anniversary of its birth.

In 1918 Iceland received a constitution which made it an independent nation, free from Denmark, retaining only the same king and having a few conventional arrangements regarding foreign relations.

WHAT IT COSTS TO GOVERN US

By PROF. M. M. HUNTER
Dept. of Economics, Univ. of Illinois

The Federal Estate Tax

EMERGENCIES have caused the federal government to turn to inheritance as a source of revenue. To help finance the Civil war and the Spanish-American war the federal government levied such a tax. In each case it was repealed soon after the war. During the World war this source was again taxed, although the entire estate was made the base of the tax rather than the share of each beneficiary.

The highest rates are not found in the war revenue acts, but in the revenue act of 1924. Under this act the rates were progressive from 1 per cent to 4 per cent on graduations ranging from $50,000 to $10,000,000. This apparent intention of the federal government to retain the tax brought forth a storm of protest from state officials. One of the principal grievances was that the federal government was entering a field already pre-empted by the states. If this reason be considered valid, then the federal government could tax neither incomes nor corporations, for both were used as sources of state funds before the federal government began to tax them.

The law was changed in 1926. The maximum rate was reduced to 20 per cent on the amount of an estate in excess of $10,000,000, while the exemption was raised to $100,000. The law provides, further, that a credit will be allowed for state taxes up to an amount not exceeding 80 per cent of the federal tax. Thus, if on an estate the federal tax amounted to $200, and the tax levied by the state was $150, the federal government would collect but $50, since it would allow a credit of any amount up to 80 per cent of the $200 tax.

Some state officials have been especially hostile to the 80 per cent credit provision. Those of Florida feel that their state was particularly injured when the provision was inserted. Since only recently Florida had adopted a constitutional amendment prohibiting the use of inheritance taxes. They take the position that congress, by the 80 per cent credit provision, is attempting to force Florida to adopt an inheritance tax, for otherwise sums would be going to the federal treasury which might otherwise go to that of the state.

Should the federal government give up the estate tax, as many demand, then the loss in receipts must be made up from some other source. If the states abandon this field, as some suggest, then property, or some other base, must be taxed more heavily.

Penworthy Proves It

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

ALL his married life Penworthy Podd had boasted of his skill with the rod and gun. In his attic there was a green tin box filled with a tangle of line, hooks and sinkers and in his closet, neatly encased in leather and available for frequent inspection, was the prized shotgun which had been presented him by his office workers years ago.

Penworthy subscribed to magazines of the stream and forest. He could talk big game as easily as the traveling salesman can talk tables and hotels, and in all his accounts he left the inference that it was his annual custom to stalk the bear, deer and mountain lion.

Mrs. Podd had heard all of his stories many times. She even knew from which magazines he drew his material and could recognize the exact moment, in each tale, when he departed from the text to elaborate from his own imagination. It was worth something to see the gentle Penworthy take the shining shotgun from its case, throw it open with a movement of the thumb, and exhibit its well-oiled perfection. Then Penworthy sought to look fierce. He drew down his gray brows and slapped his open palm upon his knee.

"When I was in Uganda," he would start, and Mrs. Podd, fearful of being an accomplice to deceit, would withdraw. One day she spoke her mind. "Penworthy Podd," it meant something when she started in this manner. "We have been married twenty years and not once have you been hunting. Not once, to my knowledge, has that gun been pointed at a stray cat, let alone a tiger or an elephant. If you are a mighty hunter, and I have been hearing you say so every day, I would like to know about it. It is my belief," and she recalled an expression of youth, "you could not shoot straight enough to hit a barn door."

Deeply offended Penworthy withdrew to his room where he examined the shotgun, patted its stock, and told it and himself he would prove to the world he had not been making idle boasts. Immediately with the air of a man greatly injured he returned to tell of his intentions.

"Martha, we go forth tomorrow on a hunting expedition. It is true, perhaps, I have neglected sport for some time, but it has been because of my love for home. You have seen fit to doubt my word. Now you shall go with me to see for yourself. We will hunt big game."

In an automobile loaded with food, cooking utensils and blankets they set out and in time reached a forest in which Penworthy was confident there was plenty of wild life. He supervised the making of camp, shouldered his gun and left parting directions.

"I will make a wide circle. Do not be alarmed if you hear firing. At sunset I will return."

Perhaps the big game scented his approach. Penworthy walked on without seeing as much as a squirrel. The bear which was his ambition and goal shrank to a deer, to a coyote, and then a rabbit. When the sun dropped low the hunter yearned for the chance to shoot anything at all.

"If I should see a bird, now," he said, "it would prove to her I can shoot straight." Then he began to wonder if he were not lost. Before long he should be reaching camp and there his wife would be waiting with dinner. He hoped she was not planning to cook the game he had promised.

"If I had fired a shot she would have heard me," he reflected, "and if I shoot I must bring something back to show for it."

The coffee boiling, Mrs. Podd sat on a log behind a clump of brush reading a book and waiting the arrival of the warrior. Penworthy, dog-tired, stumbled on, searching the trees and bushes for something that was alive and a target.

Then he saw the bird, a little red bird, bobbing about in reckless manner. Penworthy sighted deliberately. It was a pity to shoot so small and unsuspecting a thing and yet a stark question of vindication was at stake. "I've got to hit it," he said, and pulled the trigger.

The bird disappeared in a cloud of feathers, almost as if it had exploded, and there arose a commotion in the brush.

"Penworthy Podd," a strong voice came out of the dusk. "If you haven't shot the very bird off my hat!"

So Silly

It was while the Hoot Gibson company was on location in the mountains that Harry Newman and Bill Bradford borrowed an ancient fly to carry the cameras to a set. It was hard going all the way and once or twice the iron horse threatened to quit entirely. Finally a regular mountain boomed up ahead.

"Child, you can make that hill?" asked Harry anxiously. "I don't," said Billy in disgust. "But I'd like to know who'd did." —Los Angeles Times.

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in.

Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free

Inspection Service at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

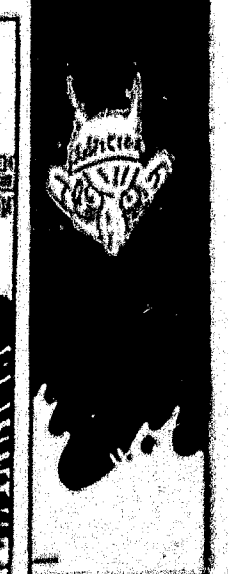

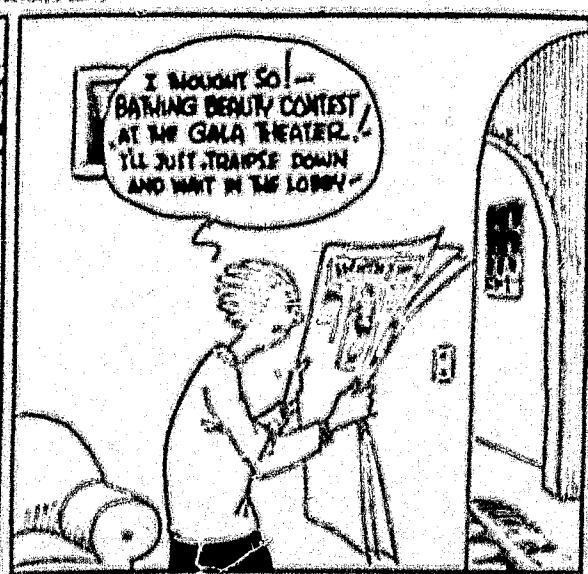

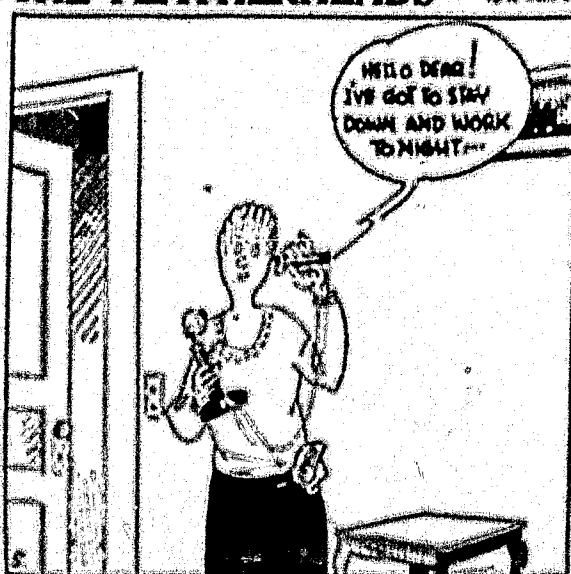

A checking-up by experienced mechanics, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

I Will Teach You To PLAY the Tenor Banjo or Mandolin

To you who have so often remarked, "If I could only play some musical instrument," I now say, "There's no reason why you shouldn't."

Even if you can't read a note of music right now, you will soon be able to after a few lessons, and before you realize it you will be playing well enough to amuse your friends and relatives.

Just call me on the phone and I will explain how easy it is to learn to play, also of my plan to organize a Banjo-Mandolin Club here in Bethel.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor. 9:30 Church School. Miss Ida Packard, Superintendent. Is your child in some Bible School? Do you think that secular education is important; but religious education, something that cannot be neglected? The Pastor is, for the present at least, teaching the Young People's Class. We should be glad to have you drop in.

10:45 Morning Worship with address and communion service and reception of members. The subject of the pastor's address will be "Introspection". To look up is important; to look backward often helps; to look forward is to find much that challenges us to do our best; but it is not less important to look within. As we approach the table of our Lord, and remember those who met with him for the last Supper we are reminded of the heart-searching words of the Master addressed to that little company.

7:00 Meeting of the Comrades of the Way. When an open meeting will be held to which all are invited. The beautiful flag ceremony will be given, and if you have not seen this, you should. The Comrades are at present a very much alive organization. A fine program for the winter season is in the making; many new members are coming into the order and the meetings are very much worth while.

The Ladies' Club will meet with Mrs. A. Van Den Kerkhoven on Thursday afternoon. Subject to be discussed will be "Maine" with current events and quotations appropriate to the subject.

METHODIST CHURCH

The Sunday School meets 9:45 A. M. Preaching service 10:45 Sunday morning. "The Man Who Saw Things Out of Sight" will be the topic.

Well may you inquire, What do we see? What do we read?

Epworth League Sunday evening 6:30.

Regular evening service 7:30. "For Whom Shall We Vote?" will be discussed.

Class Meeting Tuesday evening 7:30.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Chapman Street. Services Sunday morning at 10:45. Subject of the lesson sermon, Everlasting Punishment.

Sunday School at 10 o'clock.

Wednesday testimonial meeting at 7:30 P. M.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street--in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day--

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher. Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized--when imitation was destroying individuality--these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode. A mode of body-symmetry--of size and magnificence--of soft contours instead of straight lines--of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world. And
